Schloss Elmau-Mosse Conference
At The Cutting Edge:
Rethinking German and Jewish
Cultural and Intellectual History

JULY 12-14, 2004

Co-sponsored by the Mosse Program and Schloss Elmau

At The Cutting Edge: Rethinking German and Jewish Cultural and Intellectual History

Conference directors: Steven Aschheim (Hebrew University of Jerusalem), Anson Rabinbach (Princeton University)

The aim of this conference is to document and analyze the ways in which cultural and intellectual approaches have reshaped the study of German and Jewish history over the last few decades. The following main themes will be discussed: "The Sexual Polis"; "The Other Germanies", "The Politics of Social and Cultural History, 1945-2000" (Panel); "Boundary-Crises"; "German Jews Beyond the Emigre Synthesis: Towards a New Paradigm?" (Panel) This conference will bring together, in lively dialogue, scholars from Germany, Israel and the United States. It hopes to critically assess past achievements and pitfalls of these fields as well as examine and suggest new and promising directions of thought and analysis.

Among the questions that will be emphasized are: was social history a means of avoiding rather than confronting the German and Nazi past? Did the cultural history of the 1960's and 1970's do a better job in this respect? In what ways has the more recent cultural turn affected these questions? Has the old paradigm of assimilation and emancipation exhausted itself? What are the contemporary alternatives and how, if at all, have they changed our understandings of the German-Jewish relationship?
